Good Hart Artist Residency welcomes artist and advocate for May residency

The Good Hart Artist Residency welcomes artist and advocate Matt Bodett for its May residency.

Bodett's work confronts prescribed models of mental health and illness, defining madness as a fertile place to examine human experiences, linguistics, and meaning-making.

Utilizing drawing, painting, printmaking, poetry, performance, sculpture, and experimental forms, Bodett creates artworks that propose alternatives to the stigmas of society. He dives into expressions of his experiences, and uses them to navigate new ways of presenting complex conversations, asking his audience to engage in their own psychology.

Bodett is the founder of the Center for Mad Culture, located in the historic Fine Arts Building in downtown Chicago. The Center seeks to offer a new way of looking at the human experiences and cultural contributions of madness through art exhibitions, poetry readings and open mics, workshops, a research library; the center also organizes "Mad Pride" events and produces a podcast, which Bodett hosts with Megan Sterling.

Bodett is on the Residency's board of directors, and curated the Elevating Diverse Voices program, selecting artists Genevieve Ramos in June 2024 and Brianna Beck in June 2025. He replaces artist Janhavi Khemka, who was unable to attend the residency.

While in Good Hart, Bodett will be working on a series of drawings based on images of Saint Matthew.

"I'm drawn to him in part because of the shared name. It feels like a way to sit with what a name carries and how much of a life can get wrapped up in it," said Bodett. "I'll also be reading texts attributed to Pseudo-Matthew, thinking about how attribution works. Who gets to be seen as the "real" author of a story? Who is allowed to speak for themselves, and who gets spoken for?"

Matt Bodett and his work will be featured at an Open Studio event at the residency's studio space, 910 N. Lamkin Road, on Saturday, May 16, 2026, from 10AM to 2PM. The event is free to the public, refreshments provided.

Northern Michigan Chorale presents spring concert May 8 and 9 in Bay Harbor
